Principles of Prevention and Control of Infection

High-quality Learning Resources

About 300,000 patients develop an infection in England each year while being treated by the NHS. Protecting people from infection is an essential element of providing high-quality care, especially considering the capacity some potentially life-threatening infections have to spread within care environments.

Benefits to your organisation

Create better preventative care by identifying the sterilization process and the principles of effective waste management

Reduce the risk of malpractice and negligence

Allow employees to gain relevant skills, knowledge and understanding, leading to improved experiences for those using your services

Give employees a high standard of learning to support their roles and responsibilities

Create a more motivated and engaged workforce by supporting CPD development and possible career progression

Reinforce the importance of good personal hygiene and maintaining a clean environment

Relevant to a wide variety of people and care settings

Provide assurances that your employees are well trained

Improve your team's understanding of risk assessments and the role they play in relation to infection control
